Newsletter (#1 - 2015)

Dear members of the Rhetoric Society of Europe,

Today, we present to you our first new newsletter with some information about the biannual RSE Conference in Norwich in June 2017 and some changes within the Executive Board. We also gathered quite some news from our members, including information on upcoming conferences, recent publications and a blog. We think that this is a really good start, but we strongly encourage you to keep us posted on your news concerning the study, research and teaching of rhetoric in Europe (and beyond).

It took us a little while to set up this first newsletter, but we're very optimistic for the next newsletters to be published soon. So, please, don't hesitate to send us your news. Our goal is still to send the newsletter once a month. A rather simple way would be to have your news before the end of a month and then send it out some days later.

But now, please enjoy reading it.

Best wishes,

*Anne Ulrich, Esben Bjerggard Nielsen, Magnus Hoem Iversen and Eirik Vatnøy
Communications Team of the Rhetoric Society of Europe*

Next RSE-conference

The next biannual conference of the Rhetoric Society of Europe will take place in the country of rhetorical "Blood, toil, tears and sweat". England has fostered some of the greatest orators in modern times. Now, the study of rhetoric is growing and blossoming again, making it the perfect place for the RSE conference in 2017. We will meet at the University of East Anglia by the beautiful city of Norwich. Please put the dates in your calendar now: June 3-6, 2017. These dates include the conference and an extra workshop on a subject requested by the members of RSE. Alan Finlayson, the organizer of the conference, will have some great names ready for you, so this is something to look forward to.

A message from the board

This year, there have been some changes within the Executive Board of our society. We would like to extend our thanks to Michael Burke, Andrew Crines, Marie Lund, and Lisa Villadsen who unfortunately have withdrawn from the board. Some of them have been fostering the society from its very beginning and we are sincerely thankful for their achievements.

Our new board members are Alan Finlayson, Maria Freddi, Louise Therese Schou Therkildsen, and Martijn Wackers. We are very happy that they're joining us in promoting the study and research of rhetoric in Europe. You find a complete list of all the Board Members on our website.

Additionally, the newsletter which forms a part of our new communication efforts is strongly supported by Magnus Hoem Iversen and Eirik Vatnøy.

Jens Kjeldsen, President of RSE.
